9:10am Forum Panel Presentations

9:10am - 10:10am Family Well-Being Across the Lifespan
Social workers understand the wide range of challenges facing people in all communities. Presenters will explore new opportunities for the profession created by health care reform, increased support for veterans and military personnel, a renewed focus on healthy aging, and growing needs for school-based interventions. What does the research tell us about how social workers can make the greatest impact in serving our nation's families in this evolving landscape?

Moderator:
Tricia Bent-Goodley, PhD, MSW, LICSW
Professor, School of Social Work, Howard University

10:15am - 11:15am Liberty & Equity in the 21st Century
One of society's grand challenges is the achievement of social justice for all. This can only be accomplished by addressing the inequities and disparities many experience due to socioeconomic status, race, geography, sexual orientation, power and privilege. Guided by the profession's Code of Ethics, social workers are expected to engage in the ongoing fight for equity. This presentation will highlight critical issues in our diverse society and actions that can help move the needle forward on achieving cultural competence and social justice goals.

11:20am - 12:20pm Code of Ethics: Evolution & Emerging Issues
The NASW Code of Ethics continues to be the standard bearer in defining and advancing professional social work values and principles. This interactive discussion will examine the influence of social and professional developments on the evolution of the Code of Ethics over the last 55 years. Panelists will provide a multidimensional assessment of the Code's evolution, through the lens of practice, education, licensure and the law. Looking forward, participants will be prompted to consider emerging issues such as new technologies and globalization and their implications for social work ethics.
